Product Description:

Aluminium coil is a type of steel coil made from aluminum alloy. It is widely used in various industries for its lightweight, corrosion-resistant and high electrical conductivity properties. Aluminum is an extremely abundant metallic element on the earth, ranking first among metals in terms of reserves. It was not until the end of the 19th century that aluminum emerged as a competitive metal in engineering applications and became very popular. The development of the three important industries of aviation, construction, and automobiles requires material properties with the unique properties of aluminum and its alloys, which greatly facilitates the production and application of this new metal, aluminum.
